

Contributors

AKSANA ERKER · is a research fellow on the project “Triangulation Approach for Modelling Convergence with a High Zoom-In Factor” (TriMCo), hosted at the Johannes Gutenberg University in Mainz. She has written a series of articles about the mixed dialect of Belarusian spoken across the whole of the Slavic-Baltic contact region, and has also co-authored articles on dialect geography, areal and contact linguistics, including “Manifestations of areal convergence in rural Belarusian, or: Is there anything specific with ‘Mowa Prosta?’” with B. Wiemer (Journal of Language Contact, 2011), and “Convergence in the Baltic-Slavic Contact Zone: Triangulation approach”, with B. Wiemer and I.A. Seržant (Mouton de Gruyter, 2014).

ELENA ARKADJEVNA GALINSKAJA · is Professor of Russian Linguistics at the Lomonosov Moscow State University. She has published a number of papers on the historical dialectology of East Slavic. Her monographs include Istoričeskaja fonetika russkix dialektov v lingvogeografičeskom aspekte (Moscow, 2002), Istoričeskaja fonetika russkogo jazyka (2nd edition, Moscow, 2009), and Istoričeskaja grammatika russkogo jazyka (Moscow, forthcoming).

MIROŚŁAW JANKOWIAK · is Assistant Professor at the Institute of Slavic Studies of the Polish Academy of Sciences. He is the author of more than 40 scholarly articles, as well as two monographs: Dialektologia białoruska (Warsaw 2012, co-authored with N. Barszczewska) and Gwary białoruskie na Łotwie w rejonie kraślowskim: Studium socjolingwistyczne (Warsaw 2009, translated into Belarusian in 2012). His research interests comprise dialectology, sociolinguistics, and the Belarusian language and its dialects in the Baltic States and in the Kaliningrad region of Russia. He is also interested in the Polish variety spoken in the northern borderlands (in Belarus, Lithuania and Latvia), and in the language borders of Belarus.

HAKYUNG JUNG · (Ph.D. in Slavic Linguistics) is Assistant Professor in the Department of Russian Language and Literature at Seoul National University. Her main research area is syntax, from both diachronic and synchronic perspectives. Her main publications include “The Syntax of Nominative Objects in Modern and Old North Russian: A Comparative Approach Based on Parallels in Baltic and Finnic Languages” (2012), The Syntax of the BE-possessive: Parametric Variation and Surface Diversities (2011), and “Innovations in the Rise of the Dative-Infinitive Modal Sentence in Russian” (2010).

JAMES E. LAVINE · is Professor of Linguistics at Bucknell University. He has published widely on Slavic syntax, with a particular interest in the role of event structure in case realization. His work extends to Lithuanian and, most recently, Icelandic. Recent papers have appeared in the Journal of Linguistics, Journal of Slavic Linguistics, Formal Approaches to Slavic Linguistics, Baltic Linguistics, Non-Canonical Passives (Benjamins), and the Journal of the Moscow State University for the Humanities: Philology Series (forthcoming).

NATALIA LEVSHINA · is a postdoctoral researcher at the Belgian National Research Foundation F.R.S.-FNRS, working on the project “Mapping the Causative Continuum: A Multivariate Typological Investigation of Causative Constructions Based on a Multilingual Parallel Corpus.” Currently affiliated to the Université catholique de Louvain, Levshina obtained her PhD in Linguistics from the University of Leuven in 2011. She has also worked as a research fellow at the universities of Jena and Marburg. Her main research is related to the quantitative corpus-based comparison of languages and language varieties.

NINA VLADIMIROVNA MARKOVA · is Associate Professor at the Department of Russian Studies of the University of Petrozavodsk and a member of the editorial council of the collection North Russian Dialects. She has published a number of papers on North Russian dialects, including various aspects of dialect grammar such as partitive genitive or perfect constructions.

MARGJE POST · is Associate Professor of Russian Linguistics at the University of Bergen. She holds a Master's degree in both Slavic and Scandinavian Studies from the University of Amsterdam and completed her PhD in Russian dialectology at the University of Tromsø. She is the author of Terskij bereg Belogo morja: Zvučaščaja xrestomatija (Otto Sagner, forthcoming) and co-editor of Sentence-Final Particles: Current Views and Issues (De Gruyter, forthcoming).

SOFIJA KONSTANTINOVNA POZHARICKAJA · is Associate Professor of Russian Linguistics at the Lomonosov Moscow State University. She is the author of several introductions to Russian dialectology and specializes in dialectal phonetics and grammar, including verbal and adverb categories, morphology and semantics of the instrumental case in East-Slavic dialects. She contributed to Obščeslavjanskij lingvističeskij atlas and co-authored (together with S.V. Kniazev) an introduction to the phonetics of Standard Russian (Sovremennij russkij literaturnyj jazyk: Fonetika. Orfoepija. Grafika. Orfografija, Moscow 2012).

ILJA A. SERŽANT · is a postdoctoral researcher in Linguistics at the Zukunftskolleg (Cluster of Excellence), University of Konstanz, a member of the “Valency, Argument Realisation and Grammatical Relations in Baltic” project based at the University of Vilnius, a junior researcher at the Institute of Lithuanian Language and a member of the project “Triangulation Approach for Modelling Convergence with a High Zoom-In Factor” at the Johannes Gutenberg University in Mainz. During the editing of this volume he was a PhD student in the Department of Linguistic, Literary and Aesthetic Studies at the University of Bergen. He has published the monograph Das Kausativ im Tocharischen (LINCOM, 2014) and, together with L. Kulikov, the collective volume The Diachronic Typology of Non-canonical Subjects (John Benjamins, 2013). His main research interests include historical linguistics, language contact, areal linguistics and typology.

BENEDIKT SZMRECSANYI · is Odysseus Research Professor in Linguistics at the KU Leuven. He is the author of Morphosyntactic Persistence in Spoken English (Mouton de Gruyter, 2006), and Grammatical Variation in British English Dialects: A Study in Corpus-based Dialectometry (Cambridge University Press, 2013). He currently directs a research project on probabilistic grammars in varieties of English around the world.

BJÖRN WIEMER · is Professor of Slavic Linguistics at the Johannes Gutenberg University in Mainz. He received his PhD in Slavic Linguistics in 1996 (Hamburg) and worked as a research assistant at the chair of Slavic Languages (1996–2003) and as an affiliated scholar (2003–2007) at the University of Konstanz, before being appointed Chair of Slavic Linguistics at Mainz University (autumn 2007). His main research domains are the syntax-semantics interface and aspectology, areal and contact linguistics, modality, evidentiality and complementation, and lexical semantics, from both a synchronic and a diachronic perspective.

ANNA ŻEBROWSKA · is a research fellow in the Institute of Russian Philology at the Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. She is the author of Rol' i mesto mežkul'turnyx komponentov v prepodavanii russkogo jazyka na russkoj filologii (Poznań 2010). She has also published a number of articles, including “Język Wołyżyńszczyzny wczoraj i dziś” (in: Konstrukcje i destrukcje tożsamości: Tożsamość wobec wielojęzyczności, eds. E. Gola-chowska & A. Zielińska, vol. 2, Warsaw 2012, pp. 263–73), Polskość w Komarowszczyźnie i jej okolicach: historia i współczesność (Acta Baltico-Slavica 37, 407–18).